The Amish do not use anything mechanical. They use horse-drawn carriages for transportation. They don't have anything electrical in their homes. They work the land with horses and mules, not modern tractors. They plant corn, wheat, tobacco and hay and they grow all of their own vegetables. Amish farms always have many animals: cows, goats, chickens, geese, rabbits and of course, horses.

The Amish communities have their own schools. The families speak an old German dialect, called Pennsylvania Dutch and the children learn English when they go to school. The school day begins with prayers, readings from the bible and songs. Children go to school from 8 o'clock in the morning until 3 o'clock in the afternoon and there is no homework because they must do chores on the farm. When they are fourteen years old they finish school and then they work on the farms.
